International Society for Individual Liberty

“The world’s premier freedom networking organization”

The International Society for Individual Liberty (ISIL) is an association of individuals and organizations dedicated to building a free and peaceful world, respect for individual rights and liberties, and an open and competitive economic system based on voluntary exchange and free trade. ISIL currently has members and representatives in over 100 countries.

Members and affiliated organizations pursue our goals through independent action, using their own freely-chosen strategies. The association exists to promote the exchange of information and ideas, to study diverse strategies, and to foster fellowship.

Austrian Economics Summit

Following the 2011 World Conference in Sicily, the International Society for Individual Liberty is returning to the international libertarian conference scene. ISIL organized pioneering annual world conferences from 1982 through 2007 in numerous European locations, plus North America, Costa Rica, Swaziland, and New Zealand. These conferences played a major role in creating networks, businesses, educational organizations, and publishing projects.

The goal is to expound on free market ideas to a primarily Asian audience and to learn what free market economists are doing in China. Who will be there?

- 1) International attendees who are interested in both free markets and China;
- 2) Chinese academic and research economists who are interested in free market ideas; and
- 3) University students who want to learn about free market principles
